in which =in Dover = where

He found himself [brought to Calais next morning.]

A boy playing truant travelled 1,600 miles recently. He hitchhiked to Dover where he slept in a boat, only to find that he was brought to Calais next morning. A lorry driver gave him a lift and something to eat, and the boy got off near Paris. The boy stopped another car, but instead of being taken to Paris, he was taken to Perpignan unexpectedly. After he was picked up by a policeman, he was sent home by local authorities.
